K-8 Teachers in Philadelphia Public Schools

Marci Resnick Teacher Fund awards are made in the memory of Marci Resnick, a longtime elementary school teacher, who was also director of the Philadelphia Writing Project and associate director of National Programs for the National Writing Project. Through her love of children, her passion for literacy and the arts, and her commitment to teacher networks, she brought excitement about learning to her students, her colleagues in Philadelphia, and thousands of teachers throughout the country. The Marci Resnick Teacher Fund was created to honor her life and work. You can find out more about Marci Resnick at www.nwp.org/r/marcimemorial.

In 2014 the Marci Resnick Teacher Fund will award up to four grants of $500 to elementary teachers, K – 8, in Philadelphia public and charter schools who are interested in deepening their work as classroom teachers and growing as teacher-leaders. Awards are intended to provide classroom teachers with access to resources for professional development or classroom projects. These funds might be used for service learning, development of cross-age tutoring or family literacy programs, educational travel that relates to professional development, and/or development of a classroom library or other special materials and resources for the classroom. Two awards will be designated specifically for teachers in the Philadelphia Writing Project.

Eligible teachers are invited to apply by May 9, 2014 for spring awards intended to fund activities starting in the Summer of 2014 through the 2014-2015 school year.
